

Vigil Honors Dead, Expresses Solidarity for Tolerance, Peace

by Amy S. Hansen

Surrounded by Greenbelt residents, Lauren Cummings leads the vigil for the Orlando shooting victims.

Anger, sympathy, sadness, community and strength. With candles for the 49 victims of the Orlando, Fla., shooting, more than 100 people came together to honor the dead and seek solace at a vigil held in Roosevelt Center on June 14.

“We send our thoughts, prayers and love to the family members and friends who have been affected by this senseless tragedy,” Lauren Cummings said as she opened the vigil. Organized by Greenbelt Pride, the vigil drew families, singles, seniors and babies.

“While many were LGBTQ Latinos, whatever their sexual orientation, their race, gender or class, whatever their nationality, age or religion their deaths should profoundly impact every American.”

Her words were echoed by a large rainbow sign stating We Are Orlando.

The people in the night club thought they were in a safe place, Cummings said. “Like the movie theater in Colorado, church in Charleston, classrooms in Virginia Tech, party in San Bernadino or elementary school in Newtown before this, everyone believed in their inherent safety and unfortunately each life was taken from us too soon.”

Asking the crowd to move closer, she then asked the participants to move their minds forward and “honor the jubilant spirit of 49 souls who were taken and let us resolve to remember the impacts they’ve made in this world, not just how they were killed.”

The sentiment was repeated by Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan. “We are gathered in Roosevelt Center as others gather in Maryland and around the country,” he said. “We need to stand together in solidarity for tolerance and peace.”

The third speaker, Daniel Hamlin, added that he is angry but he will not let the anger

Council Adopts McLaughlin’s 20th – and Last – City Budget

by Kathleen Gallagher

The main event at the Greenbelt City Council’s June 6 regular meeting was the adoption of the city budget for Fiscal Year 2017, which runs from July 1 of this year through June 30, 2017. For City Manager Michael McLaughlin and his staff, budget preparation began in late fall. Following the presentation of the manager’s proposed budget at the March 29 meeting, council held 10 budget worksessions, with four of them doubled up into two meetings, to discuss the details of the budget and departmental planning for FY 2017.

This year is a significant one in the history of Greenbelt budget preparation in that McLaughlin has announced he will retire at end of the calendar year. Appointed city manager in fall 1996, McLaughlin has presented 20 proposed city budgets to 10 city councils, with FY 2017 being the last. (It should be noted that in this competition, McLaughlin ranks second only to former city manager, James Giese.)

Other matters on the agenda included several presentations, adoption of the city’s Program Open Space (POS) for the next year, and consideration of an invitation to join the Greater Baltimore Wilderness Coalition. Also presented under the Petitions and Requests section of the meeting was a signed petition regarding the development of a high-rise apartment building on property at Lakeside North by the property owner, Southern Management Corporation.

Budget Adoption

The process for budget adoption is that any changes to the manager’s proposed General Fund budget, which were designated by council at the final budget worksession on May 16, are read aloud and, along with the revised account totals, voted upon. Then the ordinance adopting the budget, appropriating the monies to fund it and establishing the real estate and personal property tax rates for the year is moved and adopted.

Relatively little drama marked next year’s budget, which at $27,227,600 came in at just barely two percent over the current year’s budget and less than $100,000 more than McLaughlin’s proposed budget. No increase was required in property tax or business personal property tax rates. That is not to say there were no late-arriving curve balls but they bottom-lined in the black. An unexpected and unwelcome cut of $25,000 in State Shared Highway User Fees during the General Assembly session and an increase in premiums for Workers Compensation insurance of $50,000 were more than balanced by reimbursement from FEMA of $100,000 of the city’s expenses in managing Winter Storm Jonas this year and nearly $20,000 of anticipated but uncommitted revenues in the proposed budget.

Council made no reductions at all to McLaughlin’s proposed budget. Categories in which council added to the proposed budget included $14,000 for economic development initiatives, $10,000 for an IT security audit,

Stream Valley Trail Delays, Center HVAC To Begin in Fall

by Kathleen Gallagher

The Greenbelt City Council’s regular meeting of April 25 included the first public hearing on the Fiscal Year 2017 city budget that was adopted on June 6, first reading of a negotiated purchase resolution for long-awaited heating and air conditioning (HVAC) improvements to be made at the Community Center, and a request to revise the Detailed Site Plan (DSP) for Phase 1 and 2 of the Greenbelt Station South Core. A variety of presentations were given, including one from State Comptroller Peter Franchot that focused on the recent upsurge of electronic tax fraud through identity theft.

As is often the case, the public hearing on the budget produced no statements from residents. It did produce a question from Greenbelt Station resident Patricia Walters, who asked if the Tax Increment Financing (TIF) for Greenbelt Station had any relationship to this city budget, but she was told it did not.

Petitions and Requests

Walters spoke further at the Petitions and Requests part of the meeting about a rash of recent attempted car break-ins that had occurred at Greenbelt Station. She requested that security be kept in mind as various trail plans and other points of access are developed for the property.

Councilmember Judith Davis suggested that further development and occupation of the property were likely to help a great deal with this problem.

HVAC

A resolution of negotiated purchase was introduced for first reading for the cost of improvements to the HVAC at the Greenbelt Community Center, an effort that has been underway for nearly two years. In December 2014, a city council worksession was held to review the recommendations of the engineering firm hired to conduct an assessment and make recommendations on the work to be done. The two major areas of deficiency identified were 1) that the ventilation unit for the 1937 portion of the Center had a design flaw that kept it from fully dehumidifying the outside air, and 2) that the HVAC unit in the gym is very noisy because the return air duct is too small. Other recommendations were also made.

A problem arose when the three responses to the city’s Request for Proposals to undertake the work all priced it much higher than had been anticipated. As a result, the scope of work

Nominations for 2016 Outstanding Citizen

The tee-shirt reads “Greenbelt is Great.”. One reason that makes Greenbelt special is its pool of citizen volunteers.

The opening ceremonies of Greenbelt’s Labor Day Festival will include the announcement of Greenbelt’s Outstanding Citizen for 2016. Besides recognition and congratulatory proclamations, the honoree serves as the Grand Marshall for the Labor Day Parade. Greenbelters are asked to help identify this year’s Outstanding Citizen by completing the nomination form (on page 12). Describe, in your own words, your nominee’s contributions or acts of kindness. Nominations are due by August 1, 2016. This year’s honoree will be the 44th since the award began in 1973.

A Committee selects 2016’s Outstanding Citizen, but that selection is made from nominations submitted from the community. Identifying that special person in a city of citizen volunteers requires input from citizens like you! Some outstanding citizens are easily spotted because of their leadership and high visibility within organizations. Some have a strong sense of compassion and touch others in a quiet way. Some have lived in Greenbelt for years; others, like 2013 Outstanding Citizen Eric Zhang, are relative newcomers. Age is not a criterion; we encourage nominations of young adults who have made significant contributions to the Greenbelt community.

All of us know individuals from Greenbelt who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding volunteer service to the community. Rarely do they receive the recognition they deserve. History indicates that many of Greenbelt’s Outstanding Citizens have been nominated several times before their selection. We know we can count on you to keep this one of Greenbelt’s special events!

Bob Zugby
Chair, Outstanding Citizen Selection Committee

Changes Proposed For Fire & EMS

Citizens of Greenbelt,
I’m writing to inform you that the Prince George’s County Fire and FMS Department has issued a General Order change that could negatively impact the volunteer-side of the system. The new order, which is set to take effect on July 1, changes the current chain of command and places the Volunteer Fire Chiefs throughout the County below the Battalion Chiefs (both career and volunteer). In general terms, this means a Battalion Chief can take command of an incident away from the local Volunteer Chief, who has the best understanding of the community and the nuances of the structures within his/her own city. In addition, restrictions are being placed on the Volunteer Chiefs as to which calls they may respond to outside of their jurisdiction, despite the fact their fire apparatus and firefighters are responding to the incident. This undermining of the volunteer departments could fuel a further decline in recruitment, retention and overall, volunteerism. As you all know, it is hard to find volunteers in today’s society as it is, and this order change adds to that difficulty. With this in mind, we would ask you to advocate on behalf of your volunteers by contacting the Office of County Executive Rushern Baker (301-952-4131) and asking him to direct the Prince George’s County Fire & EMS Department leadership to re-engage with the volunteer leadership and develop a more equitable and less detrimental agreement.

Thank you for your time and your support with this matter.
Sincerely,

Thomas Ray, Fire Chief
Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department & Rescue Squad, Inc.

Stand with PRIDE In Solidarity

It was with pain and shock that we read and watched the news unfold about the killings in Orlando. That those killings happened at a popular gay nightclub reminds us starkly of how dangerous it continues to be for LGBTQ+ people in our neighborhoods, towns, cities, and nation. While we celebrate the strides that have been made towards equality, we are again reminded of the work that needs still to be done to create safe space for all people.

Safe space for all people. Hate breeds more hate; it was hate and fear that led to the mass murders early Sunday morning in Orlando. We ask that no one use this tragedy as an excuse to breed hatred and fear in their own hearts. Homophobia is not counter-acted with Islamophobia. The path to safety and equality is through open-heartedness and understanding. We invite our neighbors to stand with us in solidarity; to be open-minded, warm-hearted, and loving towards each other and ourselves, that together we may heal and continue progressing towards becoming a nation and community that embraces both diversity and equality.

We join with the world in sending our most healing wishes and loving thoughts to those who lost loved ones, to those who will forever be changed.

On Screen

A Foursome Takes its Turn

While Love and Friendship still makes its risible rounds this week at the Old Greenbelt Theatre, three new films claim our attention on the big screen. The Meddler features Susan Sarandon as a with-it widow who follows her daughter from New York to Los Angeles; let the fun and folderol begin (PG-13, running time 100 minutes). Far deeper dross plays on the fearsome fate of humans in The Lobster (R, running time 159 minutes). Finally, two high-octane couples (including Tilda Swinton and Ralph Fiennes) criss-cross on the run in A Bigger Splash.

Council Can Decide To Oppose High Rise

We want to thank the people that came to our first Public Information Day at the firehouse. Many Greenbelt residents are opposed to the proposed Lakeside North Development. Nearly 400 Greenbelt residents have thus far signed our petition to stop the development, and opponents packed the room at the June 6 Council meeting to support our petition.

Southern Management Corporation (SMC) proposes to build a 25-story, 400-unit luxury high rise apartment complex on five acres of forested land adjacent to SMC's existing Lakeside North Apartments. The property, which includes the area containing the existing apartments and the five acres of forested land, is already at the maximum allowed density. When he built the existing apartment complex, the original developer stacked the development on one side, possibly thinking that if he left the other side undeveloped, he could later seek re-zoning to develop the other side. And now new owner David Hillman, president of SMC and owner of the Lakeside North Apartments, appears ready to do so.

The change in zoning will need to be approved by the district council, which must first seek a recommendation from the governing body of the municipality. If city council opposes the zoning change, then a two-thirds majority of all members of the district council must approve the change in zoning classification. (SMC is also believed to be seeking to bypass the rezoning process altogether by obtaining special treatment under the ongoing overhaul of the county zoning laws.)

(Per the Park and Planning Commission, the re-drafting of the zoning code is not supposed to be used to re-zone individual properties.)

Hillman has said he will abandon the project if council expresses serious opposition. It is important that this opposition be voiced now to send the message to SMC that the proposed development is not wanted.

We ask that council do two things. 1.) Write to Hillman expressing council's opposition to the proposed development and asking him not to proceed with the project. 2.) Write to our county representative, Todd Turner, objecting to the apparent plan to bypass the rezoning process by possibly getting language into the county zoning law revisions that would allow the development.

The proposed development would change the character of our community and set a precedent for high density development in Greenbelt. We expect council to address our petition in a timely manner. In the meantime we plan to hold more public events to inform residents and unite those that oppose the proposed development.

Sewer Rehab Work August to October

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) plans to rehabilitate sewer mains and sewer house connections from August into October, weather permitting. The affected streets include: Crescent Road, Rhode Island Avenue, Riverdale Road and Good Luck Road.

Existing sewer mains are nearing the end of their life cycle. The sewer mains within the project were originally installed between the 1940s and 1990s.

In the event a resident's sewer house connection is defective, WSSC will replace the portion of the sewer house connection between the public main and the property line connection. Some sidewalks, curbs, gutters and trees may have to be removed and/or pruned to accommodate the work. Residents will be notified ahead of time if there is a need for any tree removal. WSSC will restore the area when construction is completed.

All work is expected to be conducted during weekdays from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Residents will receive more detailed information from the construction team prior to any scheduled service interruption.

For any questions contact Project Manager Biplab Ghimire at 301-206-7089 or by email at BIPLAB.GHIMIRE@wsscwater.com and refer to Project No. C1CR5302K11.

was modified to focus on the most critical components of the project, and revised proposals were solicited. The result was the resolution introduced at this meeting to contract with Shapiro and Duncan at an estimated cost of $355,264 to undertake the HVAC improvements.

Council also voted to approve a separate item at tonight's meeting for the city to purchase fan coil units directly from Boland Services (Trane) at a cost of $181,792, bringing the total cost for the Community Center work to $537,056. The city can buy the units directly at a lower cost than if it bought them through the contractor.

At its next regular meeting on May 9, council adopted the resolution to contract for the Community Center work, with Councilmember Rodney Roberts voting against adoption because about 75 percent of the project will be undertaken with Program Open Space funding. Because of the high temperatures and the high use of the Community Center over the summer, work will be scheduled for after Labor Day.

Stream Valley Trail

It is typically the case that the schedule for a developer to provide certain amenities on a property is triggered by the number of housing permits that have been approved for the site. So it goes with Woodlawn Development Group, the site developer for the South Core residential component of Greenbelt Station. The County Planning Board originally stipulated that the construction of the Stream Valley Trail, a public trail system along Indian Creek, would be completed prior to the issuance of the 250th building permit.

The developer is now caught waiting for a number of permits and approvals from the state, for which the timing is in the control of neither the developer nor the city and requested that the deadline be extended to the issuance of the 352nd building permit. Staff of the city's planning department recommended that the city council extend the deadline with a number of conditions to take other aspects of the schedule into account. As a result, the staff recommendation to council was that the 300th permit should be the trigger. This would assure that the construction of townhomes in Phase III of the development would not occur until after all recreation facilities in Phase I are completed.

The staff also recommended that the city adopt a condition suggested by Planning Board staff that the developer provide signage at each planned entrance to the trail so that existing and future home buyers will be aware of the location and construction schedule for the trail. Council unanimously adopted the recommendation as its position on the matter with the county.

Presentation

Opening the presentations section of the meeting was Maryland Comptroller Peter Franchot, the chief financial officer of the state, who had asked to provide an update on the 2017 state budget at the conclusion of this year's legislative session of the General Assembly. Before doing so, he presented a Comptroller's Medallion, by which he recognizes Marylanders who make a difference in their communities, to Mayor Emmett Jordan.

Franchot spoke at length about his practices and philosophy regarding good service to the taxpayers, stating that his office has been recognized as one of the most effective comptroller's offices in the nation. Regarding the state economy, he said the index should be how working residents and small businesses are doing and that we must look not only at how much money taxpayers make but also at how much money they are able to keep. At the same time, he stresses that tax cuts must be offset by expense cuts.

The major concern he discussed was the growing problem of tax fraud through identity theft. Ten years ago in Maryland there were 367 cases of tax fraud, representing about $600,000. Last year nearly 20,000 cases were identified by the comptroller's office, representing more than $38 million. These are "astounding figures," Franchot said, "that continue to grow."

In this year's state legislative session the Taxpayers Protection Act was introduced. It would have tightened laws and regulations giving the comptroller's office increased authority to pursue enforcement. Although the bill had considerable support, it was not brought to a vote in this session, a fact which Franchot suggested might be political in nature, in response to his efforts to work cooperatively with the Republican governor.

Franchot concluded his presentation with high praise for Prince George's County's financial literacy programs. "We need this in all Maryland counties," he said.

Science Bowl Winners

At this meeting, the city council recognized the science team of Greenbelt Middle School for winning the 2016 Prince George's County Public Schools Science Bowl Championship. Chidimma Ndubuisi-Oluavu and Onome Efe-Aluebhosele were present at the meeting to represent the middle school team, as was Antoinette Glen, chair of their science department.

Magnolia Elementary School won for the second time in the elementary competition this year and the Magnolia team will attend the next regular council meeting.

Proclamations

Other presentations included two proclamations. Public Works Director James Sterling accepted the proclamation for Public Works Week. The proclamation for Older Americans Month was received by Christal Batey, community resource advocate for the Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program and Joyce Kolenky, service coordinator for Green Ridge House. Kolenky, who is new on the job, was officially introduced to the city council by Batey.

Batey also announced that for the summer (June through September) the free produce distributions would switch from Springhill Lake Elementary School to Green Ridge House, where they will be held from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. on the fourth Tuesday of the month.

Prince George's County Zoning Ordinance Rewrite

Monday June 20, 2016, 6:30 PM to 8:30 PM

Greenbelt Library

Greenbelt Advocates for Environmental and Social Justice have invited representatives from the Prince George's County Planning Department (PGCPD) of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) to provide an update on the status of the comprehensive re-write of the Prince George's County Zoning and Subdivision Regulations. The rewrite will impact Greenbelt. This is an opportunity to ask questions.

The PGCPD is comprehensively rewriting the county's Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations. The Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations are the laws that determine how land or property in Prince George's County can be developed. The intended impact of this multi-year project is to modernize the county's zoning code into a document that is aligned with the county's vision for smart growth, economic development, and improved quality of life for Prince George's County Residents.

$5,000 for security cameras in the animal shelter area, $1,000 in increased funding for the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), $4,000 for concrete repairs at the Aquatic & Fitness Center, $8,500 for increased counseling time in the GAIL program and $1,000 each in additional grant funding for the Greenbelt Community Foundation and the Greenbelt Soccer Alliance.

The budget was adopted on a 6 to 0 vote, with Councilmember Edward Putens being absent.

It is traditional that at completion of the budget adoption each year, councilmembers share their thoughts about the budget, and everyone thanks everyone else for the work accomplished. Mayor Emmett Jordan started the ball rolling by thanking McLaughlin, City Treasurer Jeffrey Williams and their staffs and the department heads for their work on the budget. He described the budget as a road map that shows where the city is going for the year, while at the same time being vehicle for the city to save and invest in its future. He was especially pleased that they were able to fund a 1.9 percent cost of living adjustment (COLA) for city employees, as well as some funding for merit increases.

Councilmember Judith Davis noted that from March to June, the proposed budget did not change much. "The city manager gave us a good, balanced budget," she said, "but there was less good news than we hoped for and not much extra to play with."

Councilmember Leta Mach stressed that all services had been maintained with no tax rate increase. Davis agreed, adding that the city would be taking care of some needed repair and maintenance issues this year as well.

Davis was joined by the other members of council in congratulating McLaughlin on his last city budget and thanking him for his many years of service to the city.

"He has seen us through some bad financial times," she said. "He has always given us budgets that are balanced and pragmatic but fair in meeting residents' needs."

The perennial discussion was held on why more residents do not attend budget worksessions. Councilmember Rodney Roberts suggested (only half kidding, he said) that more residents might be likely to attend if the meetings ended at 10 p.m.

McLaughlin thanked council for its remarks and complimented Jordan on his summary of challenges facing the city. He also thanked council for its careful consideration of the budget document and process. He agreed that FY 2017 was not as improved as everyone had hoped it would be in comparison with FY 2016, but it was still "trending up." He also thanked council for its support of the 1.9 percent COLA in the budget for staff and for its ongoing concern for the city staff.

When asked later if having hit the "20th budget" mark was a factor in the timing of his decision to retire, McLaughlin replied, "Just a coincidence."

Small Cities Month

The mayor read a proclamation declaring June to be Small Cities Month. With a population of fewer than 50,000, Greenbelt falls under the National League of Cities' definition of "small city." Councilmember Silke Pope is currently chair of the League's Small Cities Council, the steering committee for which will meet in Greenbelt from June 13 to 16.

Petition

All seats were taken in the city council room during the reading of a petition presented by Brian Almquist opposing a proposal to construct a 25-story, 400-unit luxury apartment building on the property of the Lakeside North Apartments. Almquist said the proposal had already been signed by more than 350 people. David Hillman, CEO of Southern Management Corporation, had discussed the proposal informally with council at a worksession on April 4. To date, no formal application has been filed to which the city would respond.

The petition makes two specific requests of council: 1) to write to Hillman, copied to County Executive Rushern Baker and County Councilmember Todd Turner, and ask him not to continue with this plan. Almquist said Hillman promised at the earlier meeting that he would not proceed in the face of opposition from the City of Greenbelt. 2) to write to Turner, copied to Hillman, asking the county council not to let the property in question effectively be rezoned via the zoning re-write currently being undertaken by the county Planning Board. The current R-30 zoning requires that the property remain undeveloped, and the rewrite of the zoning ordinance is not intended to be used to rezone specific properties.

Former Greenbelt resident John Stith, who now lives in Takoma Park, spoke about the high rents he encountered in the apartments in which he lived in Greenbelt. He thought having 400 units of luxury apartments added to the rental mix would be a great boon to increasing competition and driving down the price of the mid-range apartments that should be more affordable. Stith said he has long thought city government should be more active in addressing rental costs and increasing housing in Greenbelt. He encouraged the city to consider the application when it was filed.

Wilderness Coalition

The City of Greenbelt has been a participating member of the Baltimore-Washington Partners in Forest Stewardship since June 2011. That group is joining with other federal, state and local governments and non-profits to expand the area of stewardship by forming the Greater Baltimore Wilderness Coalition. Following what the mayor deemed "a spirited presentation" by Gary Allen, a member of the steering committee for the project, council directed the city manager to sign the necessary agreement.

Program Open Space

According to Assistant Planning Director Terri Hruby, the county will receive $3.3 million in POS funding for FY 2017. Based on 2010 Census data, the city should receive about $87,000. Since the county is meeting the state's requirement for funding to be spent on acquisition projects, it is allowing municipalities to use the entirety of their POS allocation for development projects.

The city already has over $900,000 in POS money encumbered for a number of projects. Council agreed to use its FY 2017 allocation and some of that from FY 2016 for funding the Community Center HVAC project. Funding would also be directed toward the Community Center playground renovation project.

New Computers Grace SHL Recreation Center

Paradyne Management, a premiere local provider of information technology and integration services, donated funds to purchase 10 new laptop computers for the computer lab at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. The lab is used by both students and adults.

Jim Sterling Is Named Public Works Director

The City of Greenbelt named Jim Sterling as Public Works director. He has served as acting public works director for the past 18 months.

Sterling has worked for the City of Greenbelt for over 30 years and started his career in the Public Works Department. From Public Works, he became the city's first Code Enforcement Inspector with the Department of Planning and Community Development. His training in engineering and building inspections allowed him to oversee many city projects as the assistant director of Community Development. Some of the projects that he has been involved in include the construction of the Public Works Facility, the Aquatic & Fitness Center improvements, Greenbelt Lake improvements, sustainable parking lot replacements, the renovation of the Greenbelt Theatre and more.

Sierra Club Honors Lore Rosenthal

Greenbelt activist Lore Lyon Rosenthal is the 2016 recipient of the Prince George's Sierra Club's Walter "Mike" Maloney Environmental Service Award. The award is presented annually to a Prince George's County resident for excellence in environmental leadership.

Rosenthal is co-founder of the Greenbelt Climate Action Network (GCAN) with Steve Kane and is currently its program coordinator, organizing monthly educational gatherings and spreading the word on climate change. She has been an important convener of people in the county, reaching out to involve more of the community in key environmental issues at the local level – among them, composting, community solar, zero waste and the county's fracking ban – to address climate change and save the planet from the bottom up.

Since 2008, Rosenthal has worked with GCAN and other local activists to pilot different approaches to expand composting in Greenbelt and surrounding communities, which could reduce the waste going to the landfill.

The award was presented to Rosenthal on Sunday, June 12 at the annual Prince George's Sierra Club picnic at Watkins Regional Park.

Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan congratulated Rosenthal on the prestigious award. "Lore has tirelessly worked to bring together people with shared interests around environmental and equity issues," he said. "She is a connector and a wayfinder who has the ability to reach across geographical, economic and social divides to convene people around progressive ideas and projects. Greenbelt is very fortunate to have her as a resident and active citizen."

The Prince George's Sierra Club established the annual environmental service award in 2005 to honor the late Walter Maloney, a civic activist, county councilmember and attorney dedicated to the rights and the quality-of-life of everyday people. Nominees are county residents who have shown excellence in local environmental leadership.

Visit Water Quality Projects Of Local Girl Scout Troop

by Jimmika Robinson

Founded in 1912 by Juliette Gordon Low, the Girl Scouts of the United States of America, a youth empowerment organization for girls in the U.S. and American girls abroad, has taken strides towards turning young girls into the leaders of tomorrow. Through various activities such as camping, acquiring practical skills and community service efforts, the girls learn firsthand important values such as honesty, compassion, fairness and sisterhood.

The Girl Scout troops of Greenbelt have made strides over the years to staying connected to their community by performing various community services.

In the past, support from the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) has allowed the Girl Scouts of Troop 4816 to work on four watershed restoration projects as a part of their silver and silver trefoil awards. The Girl Scouts were able to plant a rain garden, study the ecology of the retention pond at Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen and establish a water quality program for youth. The girls have continued their work on improving the environment each year by participating in clean-up activities for Earth Day, Public Lands Day and National Parks Day. Besides clean-up, they plant new flowers and trees, separate and transplant existing flowers, and pull invasive and other weeds to keep gardens at Schrom Hills Park, the Community Center and Springhill Lake healthy.

Besides environmental projects, some of the troop's other projects include sponsoring the annual Children's Pet Show at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival and participating in World Thinking Day, a day of international friendship, implementing projects that celebrate that friendship, and speaking out on issues that affect girls and young women around the world. These are just a few of the community projects carried out by the Greenbelt Girl Scouts.

Many volunteer members like Troop Leader Shazada Kashif, who was a girl scout herself as a teen, remain active volunteer members and leaders in the organization because they truly believe in the girls and want them to achieve their fullest potential.

As part of the GCF Explore Your Greenbelt campaign, the public is invited to visit the public gardens at Schrom Hills Park, Springhill Lake Outdoor Classroom and the Hanover Pond any day between June 16 and July 1 to see some of the wonderful projects the girls have executed. Sponsored by the Greenbelt News Review, Beltway Plaza and Paradyne Management, Explore Your Greenbelt is an awareness campaign celebrating GCF's 10th anniversary through a series of 14 events and activities that feature organizations that have received GCF funding. All are invited to attend to learn about these organizations and how GCF lives out its mission of "nourishing all of Greenbelt's Neighborhoods."

Immigrant Experience At Reel and Meal

On Monday, June 20, the Reel and Meal film series presents the feature film Amreeka at the New Deal Café in Greenbelt's Roosevelt Center. It explores how a family of immigrants from the West Bank search for a place to call home in rural Illinois at a time when many Americans are afraid of immigrants from the Middle East. The free film starts at 7 p.m., following a vegan buffet served from 6:30 p.m. (there is a charge).

Linda Rabben, professor of anthropology at the University of Maryland and author of Give Refuge to the Stranger: The Past, Present, and Future of Sanctuary, will help lead the discussion following the film. She will be joined by Bshara Nassar, a Palestinian now living in Hyattsville, who created the Nakba Museum: Project of Memory and Hope, an exhibit of photographs, paintings, discussions, lectures and video recordings of Palestinians relating their history and experiences.

The "Reel and Meal" film series is a collaboration of three Greenbelt affinity groups: Green Vegan Network, Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group and Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition, which planned this month's event.

change into hate. "Because we see what happens when hate metastasizes into a monster."

"Use the anger," said Hamlin. "Let the anger be your power to work." Hamlin said we can keep working toward the ideals that are already in the Greenbelt pledge, ideals of tolerance and equality. "This is our family," he said, referring to the people in Orlando and the people standing next to him. "We owe it to one another."
